ABOUT THE SYMPOSIUM

The Academy's Annual Symposium brings together Australia's leading social scientists to examine important contemporary issues. The 2019 Symposium focuses on Saving People & the Planet: exiting the consumptagenic system.

Welcome to 2050. We live in a healthy, sustainable and equitable world – how did we get here? The focus of the day will be on the role of the social sciences in helping to save people and the planet by moving beyond the consumptagenic system. With an emphasis on the pathways via which this has happened, and not on describing the problem, this event day will be interactive, engaging and finish with a call to action.

'Consumptagenic system' - the connected web of inputs that fuel the unhealthy, inequitable and environmentally destructive way our society makes and consumes goods and services.

Convenors: Professor Sharon Friel FASSA (School of Regulation and Global Governance, ANU), Dr Ashley Schram (School of Regulation and Global Governance, ANU), and Professor Christine Parker (Law School, Melbourne University)
